

Counseling Manual Draft Comparison

Claxton draft compared with the current 2026 working draft

This document compares the latest Canva export of DRAFT St. Louis Public Schools Comprehensive Counseling Manual -Claxton with the current SLPS School Counseling Handbook 2026 Draft. It is a comparison document only. It does not revise either draft.

Generated June 29, 2026 from read-only Canva PDF export and local PDF text extraction. Page counts and word counts are extraction-based and may differ slightly from visual page review. SLPS branding is used for internal district working-draft review.

Bottom line: the latest Canva Claxton source is additive compared with the prior local PDF. It now includes a substantial CCR pathway and deliverables expansion, while the current handbook remains a redesigned operating handbook with more implementation procedures and appendices.

Quick Read

The drafts are not two versions of the same layout. Claxton is closer to a compilation manual that embeds source standards, current ASCA Ethical Standards, Missouri Learning Standards tables, job descriptions, ethics text, a provider directory, CCR pathway content, and annual deliverables directly in the manual body. The current draft is a redesigned operating handbook. It retains the core program concepts but expands implementation controls, procedures, role boundaries, evaluation routines, and appendices.

The key review decision is whether Claxton artifacts should remain in the handbook body, move to a source/reference file, or be replaced by current controlled district sources. The newest Canva additions make that decision more important because several added items appear to be live program strategy or year-specific deliverables.

Review Flags

Item	Difference	Recommended decision
Provider directory	Claxton includes names and phone numbers. Current draft does not.	Recommended to keep outside the handbook in a controlled, updateable resource list because provider data changes.
Full ASCA ethics text	Claxton reproduces the standard. Current draft references and operationalizes ethics.	Recommended to cite/link or include in source reference rather than reproduce full external standards in the manual body.
Legacy job descriptions	Claxton reproduces job descriptions. Current draft summarizes role expectations.	HR should confirm whether current official job descriptions should be linked, quoted, or kept outside the handbook.
Historical acknowledgements	Claxton includes committee and acknowledgement material. Current draft omits it.	Decide whether this belongs in front matter, archive notes, or the source/reference document.
Responsive service time allocation	Claxton shows 0 percent responsive service in its State Distribution table, but Claxton also describes responsive services as a program component. Current draft treats responsive services as a core time allocation.	Review before final approval because the Claxton table may be an error or extraction issue.
ReThink Ed reference	Claxton names ReThink Ed/Rethink ED as the SEL platform. Current draft does not name a specific platform.	Include only if the district confirms the platform is current and should be in a controlled handbook.
Board policy section	Claxton contents list board policy but extracted pages do not provide a substantive policy section. The contents also show duplicated Section V numbering and a V111 typo.	Current draft is stronger, but should be reviewed by district policy/legal leadership.
Claxton source quality issues	The extracted Claxton text appears to duplicate ASCA A.10 Marginalized Populations and contains table-of-contents numbering errors.	Treat these as reasons to use Claxton as a source for review, not as a formatting model.
Core beliefs equity language	Claxton includes the phrase The African American Achievement Gap can be eliminated. Current draft has equity content but not this exact phrase.	Decide whether to preserve, update, or archive the exact language.
Vision and mission scope	Claxton uses district-wide vision and mission language. Current draft uses counseling-program-specific vision and mission language.	Decide whether the current handbook also needs district-wide vision and mission front matter.
Newest Canva CCR additions	The Canva source adds PK-12 CCR coherence, Junior Achievement, SchoolLinks, STEM Labs, middle school computer science, high school pathways, CTE structure, and CCR deliverables.	Decide which parts are stable handbook content and which belong in the source/reference document because they are program-specific or year-specific.
Annual deliverables timing	The latest Canva source includes 2025-26 counselor and specialist deliverables.	Confirm whether these are historical, current, or superseded before adding them to the handbook body.

Counseling Manual Draft Comparison

Claxton draft compared with the current 2026 working draft

1. Where should the provider directory live: handbook body, source/reference document, or a controlled live resource list?
2. Should the full ASCA Ethical Standards be reproduced, linked, cited, or summarized?
3. Which responsive service time allocation should be used after resolving Claxton's 0 percent table conflict?
4. Should legacy job descriptions and HR-controlled fields be quoted in the handbook or kept as HR-controlled references?
5. Should Claxton's exact equity language and district-wide vision/mission language be preserved in the current draft?
6. Should the newly added CCR pathway, CTE transition, and annual deliverables content be represented in the handbook body or kept in the companion source/reference document?

Substantive Program Differences

#	Difference	Evidence	Review implication
1	Current draft is an operating handbook, not a revised copy of the Claxton draft.	The current draft adds planning artifacts, procedures, calendars, role boundaries, and implementation tools. The Claxton draft reads more like a compilation of standards, job descriptions, ethics text, and resource lists.	Use the current draft as the working manual, but verify any district-required legacy language before deletion.
2	Claxton includes source/reference material inside the manual.	The full ASCA ethical standards and a mental health provider directory are embedded in Claxton. The current draft mostly summarizes or references those areas and keeps live or changing resources out of the manual body.	Decide whether SLPS wants these items in a source/reference document instead of the handbook.
3	Current draft standardizes mixed terminology.	Claxton uses mixed language: older labels such as guidance program and MCCP appear alongside current Missouri Learning Standards language such as intrapersonal/interpersonal development and ICAP. Current draft standardizes on school counseling program, Missouri CSCP, academic/career/intrapersonal/interpersonal development, and current program management language.	Keep the current terminology unless SLPS leadership requests legacy labels for continuity.
4	Current draft has stronger implementation controls.	Claxton names implementation steps, but current draft provides annual administrative agreements, advisory council routines, use-of-time analysis, data review, annual results reporting, and manual maintenance.	Preserve these controls in the final handbook.
5	The drafts differ sharply on responsive service time allocation.	Claxton's State Distribution for Counseling Services table shows 0 percent responsive service at elementary, middle, and high school levels, which conflicts with Claxton's own program-component description. Current draft treats responsive services as a core program component and includes planning ranges that allocate substantial counselor time to responsive services.	District leadership should confirm the intended allocation before relying on either draft's percentages.
6	Current draft adds extensive operational appendices.	Current draft includes grade-level scope sequences, planning templates, transcript/ICAP tools, referral forms, safety and behavior forms, PROBE, and annual results templates. Claxton does not include operational counseling forms in the extracted PDF.	Keep these appendices, but confirm live district forms before final approval.

Counseling Manual Draft Comparison

	collaboration guidance.	includes general collaboration language but no equivalent role-boundary guidance.	reduce implementation ambiguity.
8	Current draft adds explicit equity and access content.	Current draft includes culturally responsive practice, underserved student populations, students with disabilities, English learners, and students experiencing homelessness, foster care, or high mobility. Claxton does not present these as dedicated operating sections in the extracted text.	Keep these sections and route them for district equity, legal, and student-support review.
9	Vision and mission differ in scope.	Claxton carries district-level vision and mission language, including the district of choice framing. Current draft uses counseling-program-specific vision and mission language.	Decide whether district-wide vision/mission language should also appear in the current handbook front matter.
10	Claxton includes a specific equity commitment not carried forward verbatim.	Claxton states that the African American Achievement Gap can be eliminated. Current draft includes equity and underserved-student sections but does not use that exact phrase in the extracted text.	Confirm whether this exact commitment should be preserved, revised, or placed in a historical/source note.
11	Claxton names specific counselor responsibilities that should be checked against current procedures.	Claxton's essential responsibilities list includes suicide risk and harm-to-others assessments, IEP and 504 meeting participation, special education testing referrals, and 504 coordination with the school nurse.	Ask counseling leadership, HR, legal, and student support teams which responsibilities should be stated directly in the handbook.
12	The latest Canva source adds a large CCR pathway section that was not in the prior local Claxton PDF.	The new material includes PK-12 CCR coherence, PK-5 Junior Achievement, middle school computer science, high school pathways, and CTE transition language.	Treat this as a source update that may inform the handbook's CCR and ICAP sections, but avoid transplanting live pathway strategy into the handbook without owner review.
13	The latest Canva source adds annual CCR deliverables.	The added deliverables pages are tied to 2025-26 activities such as FAFSA, ACT, SchoolLinks, applications, senior meetings, and summer school.	Use these as a calendar reference only after confirming whether a 2026-27 deliverables calendar supersedes them.

Structural And Editorial Differences

#	Difference	Evidence	Review implication
1	Claxton table of contents has structural errors.	The contents repeat Section V and render Section VIII as V111. See also the Claxton source quality review flag.	Correct if Claxton remains in circulation. Do not carry these numbering errors into the current handbook.
2	Claxton appears to duplicate an ASCA ethics subsection.	The extracted text shows A.10 Marginalized Populations twice. See also the Claxton source quality review flag.	Treat as a source quality issue and avoid reproducing the duplicate in the handbook.

4	Current draft includes a transition bridge for old standards codes.	Current draft adds Legacy Standards Continuity and Current Missouri Alignment to connect PS/AD/CD codes to current content areas.	Keep this bridge if reviewers need continuity from prior manuals.

Recommended Use

Use this comparison as a review map. The current draft appears broader and more operational. Claxton is useful for historical continuity and for checking whether older artifacts need preservation. The next review should decide which Claxton artifacts belong in the handbook itself and which belong in a source/reference companion file.
